Disclosure of Actual or Potential Conflict of Interest

The aim of Psychiatric Times is to provide our readers with accurate, fair balanced, and objective scientific information. Although Commentary/Op Ed pieces may adopt a particular stance or point of view, they are also expected to be fair, accurate, and fair balanced. To these ends, members of our Editorial Board as well as contributors to Psychiatric Times are asked to disclosure actual and potential "conflicts of interest" (COIs). A COI is generally understood to mean a situation in which financial or other personal considerations have the potential to compromise or bias professional judgement and objectivity. A COI by itself does not signify any wrongdoing or breach of faith; however, it is important for Psychiatric Times and its readers to be informed of actual or potential COIs to be able to assess articles and commentaries objectively. We therefore request that you respond to the following queries.

With respect to the past 12 months, have you or your spouse/partner:

1. Had any enduring financial relationships with any proprietary entity producing health care goods or services (with the exception of non-profit or government organizations) that might create a potential conflict of interest? Examples include participation on Speakers' Bureaus for pharmaceutical or medical device companies; serving as a paid consultant to such companies; receiving regular stipends/honoraria from such companies; or receiving research funding from such companies.

Yes  No

If you answered yes, please indicate the specific relationship that might present a COI, with respect to your activities with or responsibilities to Psychiatric Times:
